

What To Expect At Our First Meeting

At our first meeting we will have the opportunity to “get to know one another.” We want to listen to your needs, desires and expectations and we want you to feel comfortable in asking us questions as well.

It's a good idea to have all the decision-makers present at the first meeting. Typically, everyone has some sort of input or information to add about the project. The following are some of the items we would like to discuss with you at our first meeting:

- What do you like or dislike about your present deck, if you have one? Why are you considering this deck project now? What do you hope to gain from this project? Present and future needs?
- Is your style contemporary, traditional, or somewhere in between? It's a good idea to have pictures from magazines or elsewhere to help convey the look or details you are after.
- How do you see yourself going through the process of selecting a deck contractor? How do you see yourself going through the design process?
- What is your target investment? (We'll need to have a frank and honest discussion of how much you want to invest in your home; only you can tell us that. We can only estimate how much your project will cost.) How will you finance the project - refinance or cash?
- What is important to you in a deck company? Design? Experience? Single source of responsibility? Craftsmanship? Processes like scheduling and budgeting? Or something else?
- How long do you plan to stay in your home?
